Ipoh, the capital of Perak, one of Malaysia's thirteen states. Located by the Kinta Valley, Ipoh was once upon a time the most productive tin mining area in the world.

However, today Ipoh has taken a shift. It is now a popular destination, much sought after by tourists both local and foreign due to it being easily accessible by road, rail and air with direct air linkages to the neighbouring states of Malaysia and to the major gateway of Singapore.

Ipoh White Coffee

It is in Ipoh Old Town the first generation of white coffee was pioneered by a Hainanese migrant. The Hainanese migrants who were unaccustomed to drinking the western bitter and acidic style coffee had then modified the taste of western coffee, gradually adapting it suit the palate of the Chinese population. They adopted the unique roasting, brewing and stirring techniques based on the traditions, blended with different coffee beans, thus creating the unique Old Town wonderful and unforgettable aroma, leaving you craving for more.

Ipoh has become a food haven. Folks from far and near regularly flock to Ipoh for a weekend getaway of good food together with either 'free and easy' or 'exciting and adventurous' activities.
